The Value of Membership

The cornerstone of a membership in the HNBA should be to receive equal or better value for you or your business in return for the membership fee. With consideration to our current economy and challenging times in the building industry it is understood why a current or potential member questions the expense of belonging. Question the value of membership and you will find...

- By attending the last membership meeting one could have received the value of information on rules and regulations relating to Wisconsin DOT, delivered directly by WDOT Enforcement Officer Dan Boese. Knowing the law and preventing a ticket could easily equate to one-half the value of a membership fee, not counting the cost of down time.

- By attending the next membership meeting one could learn a life-saving first-aid technique that could be priceless in the event of an accident. Cost to learn is free and value of the knowledge is priceless. There is real value at least equal to the other half of your dues.

So, in just two months the HNBA delivered value equal to or better than the cost of the membership. Then there are all the other educational opportunities the HNBA sponsors, the very newsletter you are reading right now – jam packed with good information delivered every month, a free legal hot-line, a free professionally-prepared construction contract, home show, parade of homes, and on and on and on. By owning a membership and participating in the HNBA one can easily find this is a real deal and of absolute value. If you know of someone in the industry that could benefit from a membership encourage them to check us out, or better yet, bring them to the next educational opportunity or general membership meeting.

Membership

Feb. 20th provided PERFECT weather for our first Snowmobile Run and Ice Fishing Day! Those of us with sleds did about 100 miles through the Blue Hills on excellent trails and had a blast! Those who stayed back on the lake didn't catch many fish, but had a great time playing cards, eating, socializing, etc. The kids enjoyed sledding and stoking the bonfire, and everyone seemed to have a really good time.

We would like to do more of these fun, family-oriented activities to give members the chance to get to know each other better. If you have any suggestions for future events, I'd love to hear them!

The next Membership Committee Meeting will be on Wed, March 31, 5:30pm at Indianhead Insurance Agency. We can really use your ideas on how to best add value to your membership, so please consider joining us for an hour!!

Above: Perfect weather allowed for an ongoing card game.

Right: Zach Buse landed the largest fish of the day.

Local Happenings

Barron County

The Barron County Zoning Committee supported a resolution which would delay the implementation of the Farmland Preservation Conversion Fee until 2013. This would give the county time to update their Farmland Preservation Plan.

County Board Chairman Jess Miller guessed that at least 35 counties were placing this item on their agendas for discussion. Many counties are just as upset with these fees as property owners.

The Comprehensive Plan is still in the review process. Maybe March passage?

Burnett County

The Burnett County Comprehensive Planning Committee is sending the proposed plan forward to the Land Use and Planning Committee for review.

It looks like a March vote at the County Board for this one also.

Sawyer County

At their January meeting the Sawyer County Board adopted the final draft of the Comprehensive Plan.

In a continuing effort to save money in the face of reduced county revenues, the Sawyer County Board of Supervisors on Jan. 21 voted 11-5 to approve the consolidation of the zoning and land/water conservation departments under the direction of a single administrator. The board appointed current County Conserver Dale Olson as the new administrator of the combined zoning and land/water conservation departments. Olson will begin his new job following the retirement of current zoning administrator William Christman on April 1.

The Sawyer County Zoning Committee again discussed proposed short term vacation home license/regulations. There are those who believe "something, but not much" should be offered for Public Hearing. Others believe it is a "solution in search of a problem." Should be a great Public Hearing.

Do you feel like government is happening to you instead of working with you? Do you feel that politicians at the local, state and/or national level just don't get it? Are you wondering what you can do to help "right the ship"? Well, it could be as simple as getting involved!

Government Affairs is in need of a chairperson—and committee. One of the most important functions of a builders association is to be the eyes and ears of the construction industry! Keep membership informed when proposed policies could hurt housing, encourage fellow members to speak up, call, email or write to their representatives, and help HNBA fundraise for Building a Better WI and the Building Industry Council. No experience needed... guidance is available from WBA and other associations. Help make a difference: get involved! Call Barb at 736-4622 or Pat Mattmiller at 234-1096.

Monday Morning Review 2.18.10

Supreme Court Supports Free Speech

In mid-January the U.S. Supreme Court handed down a much anticipated decision in the Citizens United v FEC case. Court watchers have been expecting this case for the past few months and on recently the decision was finally announced.

In a 5-4 decision the court decided that:

- Corporate spending on issue advocacy communications cannot be restricted, which will bar provisions of McCain-Feingold and efforts by states to place restrictions on when issues ads can be aired before an election.
- Disclaimer and disclosure requirements are permissible for independent expenditures and issue advocacy communications.
- Direct corporate campaign contributions still may be prohibited. In other words, states like Wisconsin that forbid corporations from making direct contributions to candidates and political action committees may continue to do so.

“Good government” groups have issued statements that this change will have a horrible effect on Campaign 2010. Others noted that they believed this decision was going to go even further by allowing direct corporate contributions to campaigns and political action committees and would also forbid government from disclosure requirements.

The attorney that WBA and the Building Industry Council (BIC) uses for election and grass roots lobbying matters summarized the decision like this. “As expected, Citizens United is a landmark campaign finance decision that will have direct implications on political speech in 2010 and beyond. In the next few weeks, regulators will need to decide how to try to address unconstitutional regulations while legislators will need to try to address unconstitutional state laws that conflict with today’s holding. Government bodies that do not act quickly are likely to face litigation challenging speech restrictions that remain in place. We will, of course, continue to study and evaluate the broad effects of Citizens United on state or federal campaign finance law as well as other areas of political speech.”

Kanavas decides against 3rd full term in State Senate; Rep. Zipperer frontrunner

In a surprise announcement State Senator Ted Kanavas (R-Brookfield) announced that he would not be seeking a third full term in the state Senate. Kanavas was first elected to the state Senate in a special election in the summer of 2001 to replace Margaret Farrow who was selected by then Governor Scott McCallum to serve as Wisconsin’s first female Lieutenant Governor.

It was rumored that Kanavas was leaving the state Senate to explore a run against U.S. Senator Russ Feingold but by the end of the week Kanavas announced that was not in his future plans. The bottom line on why Kanavas decided against another run for the state Senate in his very safe, very Republican Senate seat is he wanted to spend more time perusing business opportunities in the private sector. In other words he wanted to make more money at a job outside of politics. Quickly after Kanavas’ retirement announcement Representative Rich Zipperer (R-Brookfield) announced he would not run for re-election to his state Assembly seat in order to run for Kanavas’ state Senate seat.

Zipperer is the early front runner for this seat for a number of reasons starting with the fact that his current assembly seat is a 71.5% GOP seat, he was endorsed today by former Lieutenant Governor and state Senator Margaret Farrow, and it is very likely he will receive the early endorsement of both Kanavas and Congressman F. James Sensenbrenner (Zipperer served as a longtime staff member for Sensenbrenner). All of the above reasons in addition to the fact that Zipperer received 59% of the vote in the Republican primary for his current Assembly seat in a five way primary.

Monday Morning Review (Continued)

Building a Better Wisconsin PAC and the NAHB BUILD-PAC. I am happy to report that your efforts on this event helped raise over $5000 for both PACs.

A special thank you to our special invited guests, Rep. Roger Roth, Reid Ribble and Sen. Kapanke, all members running for Congress in 2010. We look forward to incorporating an event like this to be part of WBA conventions in the future!

CO bill passes State Senate and Assembly

Recently the bill to require the installation of carbon monoxide detectors in one and two-family homes (SB 415) was passed by the state Senate and state Assembly. The bill passed the state Senate on a voice vote and the state Assembly by a vote of Ayes 69, Nays 27.

You may remember that part of the 2009-2010 WBA GA Agenda, which was approved by the WBA Board of Directors in October 2008, included a provision to support legislation that would require carbon monoxide alarms to be installed in Wisconsin homes. Existing homes would be required to install a plug-in alarm and any new one or two-family home would be required to install a hard-wired carbon monoxide alarm.

These bills mirror the current smoke detector law which essentially means that to comply with this new requirement you would simply need to replace a smoke alarm with a "combo alarm" that acts as both a smoke and carbon monoxide detector in new homes. If this bill is signed into law by the governor it would not take effect until 2/1/11.

We expect Governor Doyle to sign this bill into law soon and are hopefully that it will be a public bill signing that we can participate in. Thank you to members who helped lobby on this, without your efforts this would have not moved this quickly.

Feingold down in hypothetical race against TGT

A poll was recently released that showed U.S. Senator Russ Feingold trailing in hypothetical match up against former Wisconsin Governor Tommy Thompson by a margin of 47-43.

The poll, conducted with a sample size of 500 likely voters in Wisconsin also showed that Tommy had much better favorability numbers than Feingold. Tommy had a 56-39 favorable/unfavorable ratio while Feingold's numbers came in at 47-48. A 47-48 favorable/unfavorable ratio, regardless of who the GOP candidate will be is not good news for Senator Feingold in his efforts to win a third full term in the U.S. Senate.

For the GOP all eyes continue to be on Tommy Thompson to see if he will actually "make the plunge" and challenge Feingold this fall.

The Economic Impact of Housing in Wisconsin

The Wisconsin Builders Association recently commissioned the National Association of Home Builders to perform an analysis of the economic impact of housing in the state of Wisconsin. Dr. Elliot Eisenberg, an economist with NAHB, presented the findings of this study at the WBA Board Meeting on February 12 in Appleton. Below is the Executive Summary of this study. To see all results of this study, click here.

Home building generates substantial local economic activity, including new income and jobs for residents, and additional revenue for local governments. The National Association of Home Builders has developed a model to estimate the economic benefits. The model captures the effect of the construction activity itself, the ripple impact that occurs when income earned from construction activity is spent and recycles in the local economy, and the ongoing impact that results from new homes becoming occupied by residents who pay taxes and buy locally produced goods and services. In order to fully appreciate the positive impact residential construction has on a community, it's important to include the ripple effects and the ongoing benefits. Since the NAHB model was initially developed in 1996, it has been successfully applied to construction in over 500 projects, local jurisdictions, metropolitan areas, non-metropolitan counties, and states across the country.

The report presents estimates of the impacts of building 1,000 single family homes, representative of the homes built in the state of Wisconsin (see map) in 2008.

The estimated one-year metro area impacts of building 1,000 single family homes in Wisconsin include

-  $180.7 million in income for Wisconsin residents,
-  $29.8 million in taxes for the state and local governments in the state, and
-  3,255 jobs in Wisconsin.

These are local impacts, representing income and jobs for residents of Wisconsin, and taxes (and other sources of revenue, including permit fees) for all local jurisdictions within the state area. They are also one-year impacts that include both the direct and indirect impact of the construction activity itself, and the impact of local residents who earn money from the construction activity spending part of it within the state.

The additional, annually recurring impacts of building 1,000 single family homes in Wisconsin include

-  $34.1 million in income for Wisconsin residents,
-  $12.4 million in taxes for the state and local governments in the state, and
-  690 jobs in Wisconsin.

These are ongoing, annual local impacts that result from the new homes being occupied, and the occupants paying taxes and otherwise participating in Wisconsin's economy year after year. In order to fully understand the impact residential construction has on a state, it's important to consider the ongoing benefits as well as the one-time effects.

The single family impacts were calculated assuming that new single family homes built in Wisconsin in 2008 had an average price of $250,184; were built on a lot for which the average value of the raw land was $18,468; required the builder and developer to pay an average of $5,124 in impact, permit, and other fees to local governments; and incurred an average property tax of $4,524 per year. This information was obtained from the State of Wisconsin Legislative Fiscal Bureau, the U.S. Census Bureau, the BA, and a number of local Home Builder Associations across the State of Wisconsin.

Slow Recovery May Be Leading to Serious Housing Shortages

Even as foreclosures continue to flood some of the worst-hit housing markets in the country, economists are beginning to sound the warning that today's extremely low levels of new residential production could lead to significant housing shortages, especially among market-rate rental apartments, as household formation rates return to normal.

The housing downturn and economic recession have kept household formation rates at below-normal levels for roughly three years, said NAHB Chief Economist David Crowe. As the economy moves to higher ground, the housing market will begin to feel the pressure from new households, he said, and there will be a surge of demand from echo boomers, who comprise an even larger group than their baby-boomer parents.

NAHB economists project that the industry will need to deliver 16 million homes over the next 10 years to keep pace with demand. As the excess inventory is worked off, which is likely by the end of 2012, the long-run demand for new housing — based on population growth, immigration and the replacement of losses from the housing stock — will average approximately 1.5 million single-family and 300,000 multifamily units annually, or about 1.8 to 1.9 million total starts.

Coming off extremely low levels of construction, starts last month were running at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 591,000, a level that is far below what will be needed.

When housing starts bottomed out in the first quarter of 2009, they were running at only 27% of average starts during the "normal" production period of 2000 to 2003, according to analysis by NAHB. This year, production is expected to rise to 45% of normal, with a further increase to 67% of normal next year.

The road back to normal levels of residential construction will be longer for some states than others. By the end of 2011, the top 20% of the states will see their production levels back to normal. Those states include Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota, New Mexico, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Looking a Gift Fridge in the Crisper

I've never considered myself to be a particularly lucky person when it comes to winning things. I purchase my fair share of raffle tickets and have collected a few beer signs or knick-knacks that have quickly been bartered for something only slightly more useful (or re-gifted at the next raffle). A few years back, I was the big winner at a Walleyes for Tomorrow banquet (don't ask). I won a gun. I was told it was a really nice gun. Savage 7mm Mag something or other. Could down an elk. Anyhow, I envisioned trading it toward new living room furniture. My husband traded it toward yet another deer rifle. So much for my big winnings.

But at the WBA Convention in Appleton, the Ritzingers won a refrigerator. A nice fridge. Stainless steel. All fridge. Can house a 2-week supply of groceries, including beer & soda.

There's just one problem with winning a major appliance: how to get it home. We had 4 Ritzingers in a Subaru wagon. And wouldn't you know, not one of the HNBA members there brought a truck! After some Sunday morning stress and bell-hop tipping, our fridge was loaded in Kelly Licht's SUV. Thanks, Kelly & Dianne!

Now my new prize doesn't fit in my kitchen. Just my luck!
